

The Games of the XVII
Olympiad (Rome, 1960)

The image of the Capitoline she-wolf (the symbol of Rome) is depicted in the centre of the poster of the Games of the XVII Olympiad along with the columns that are adorned with the silhouettes of the ancient Romans, greeting the athlete as he crowns himself with the garland of the winner. It is worth noting that the famous “Belvedere capitol”, one of which is represented (above the Roman column) on the poster, adorned the palaces of Vatican. At the top of the column there are the inscriptions “Rome” and “MCMLX” (the year of the Games). At the top of the poster there are the Olympic rings and the inscription “The Games of the XVII Olympiad, Rome, 25. VIII - 11. IX”. 290 thousand copies of this poster created by Armando Testa were published in eleven languages.

The diving events at the Games of the XVII Olympiad were held at the Aquatic Sports Centre located on the territory of the sports complex “Foro Italico” from August 26 to September 2, 1960, in Rome, Italy.

The competition was attended by 74 athletes (including 26 women) from 25 countries.

Four sets of prizes were contested in the men’s and women’s 3-metre springboard and 10-metre platform.

32 athletes from 19 countries took part in the men’s springboard competition. The Olympic springboard champion was Gary Tobian, the second place was taken by his fellow countryman Samuel Hall, and the third place was won by the athlete from Mexico Juan Botella Medina.

28 athletes from 18 countries took part in the men’s platform event. The winner and the silver medallists were athletes from the United States Robert Webster and Gary Tobian, respectively, the bronze award was given to Brian Phelps from the UK.

16 female athletes from 10 countries took part in the women’s springboard competition. Ingrid Krämer, a diver from the United German team, became the Olympic champion. The silver medal was awarded to the American diver Paula Jean Myers-Pope, the bronze went to Elizabeth Ferris from the UK.

Award Medal

The medal preserved the design created by Professor Giuseppe Cassioli. The only innovation was the encasing with a bronze chain of laurel leaves, ending with a plate. The name of the sport in which its owner became the winner or prize-winner was engraved on the reverse side of the plate.

Commemorative Medal

The central position is occupied by a relief image of a running woman. She holds a flaming Olympic torch against the backdrop of five intertwined Olympic rings.

The reverse side is represented by the image of eagles rising above the Olympic stadium and heading into the distance. The composition is completed by inscriptions framing the medal: "XVII Olympiad", the year of their commencement in the Roman numerals "MCMLX" and the name of the organizing city "Rome". With this story its designer, Professor Emilio Greco, wanted to show the importance of the Olympic Games for the world community and the spread of Olympic ideals around the world.

The design of the official badge was based on the image of the symbol of Rome - the Capitoline she-wolf. Below are five intertwined rings and the inscription "Rome", the year of the Games in Roman numerals "MCMLX". The badge, made of bronze, is framed by a wreath of bay leaves. Its opposite side has an inscription "XVII Olympiad". On the rectangular bar located at the bottom of the badge, an indication of the affiliation of its owner (coach, athlete, judge, radio commentator). Badges with a double laurel wreath were made for the IOC members, heads of the organizing committee, national Olympic committees, and international sports federations.

JAPAN INVITES YOU

XVIII OLYMPIAD TOKYO 1964

The Games of the XVIII Olympiad (Tokyo, 1964)

The diving events at the Games of the XVIII Olympiad were held in Tokyo, Japan, from October 11 to 18, 1964 at the National “Yoyogi swimming centre” in the presence of 13,000 spectators.

Eighty athletes (34 of them women) from 20 countries took part in diving events.

Four sets of prizes were contested in the men’s and women’s 3-metre springboard and a 10-metre platform.

Twenty-seven athletes from 16 countries took part in the men’s springboard diving event. The winners and prize-winners were athletes from the USA. The Olympic champion title was awarded to Kenneth Sitzberger, Francis Gorman became the silver medallist, and the bronze medal went to Lawrence “Larry” Edwin Andreasen.

Thirty athletes from 16 countries took part in the men’s platform events. The winner of the competition was American athlete Robert Webster, the second place was taken by Italian diver Klaus Dibiasi, and the third place went to Thomas Gompf from the USA.

The official Olympic poster features a red circle symbolising the rising sun, above are five intertwined Olympic rings. At the bottom of the poster is an inscription “Tokyo, 1964”. The poster, designed by Japanese artist Yusaki Kamekura, issued in 100,000 copies.

Award Medal

The award medal remained the same as its predecessors since 1928. The inscription was changed to "XVIII Olympiad, Tokyo, 1964". The frame of the medal attained a cavity for a removable ribbon. The ribbon stripes carried the colours of the Olympic rings. The medals were made of gilded silver, silver and bronze.

Collection Medallion

The official gilded square-shaped badges symbolically included the rising circle as the embodiment of the sun and five Olympic rings. The affiliation of the badges was determined by the colour and the corresponding inscriptions. Special badges were made for the Emperor of Japan, members of his family, the President and members of the IOC, the heads of national Olympic committees and international sports federations, these badges differed in the framing of the Olympic rings with flowers.

The Games of the XIX Olympiad (Mexico City, 1968)

The official poster of the Games of the XIX Olympiad in Mexico City was a collaboration of three artists. The central element of the poster is the symbol of the Games and the stylized text "MEXICO-68".

The diving events at the Games of the XIX Olympiad were held from October 17 to 26 1968 in Mexico City, Mexico at the Francisco Marquez Olympic pool. It should be noted that the city is located at an altitude of 2240 m above the sea level.

The competition was attended by 81 athletes (including 36 women) from 21 countries.

Four sets of Olympic prizes were contested in the men's and women's 3-metre springboard and the 10-metre platform.

Twenty-eight athletes from 16 countries took part in the men's springboard event. The Olympic champion was the American diver Bernard Wrightson, the silver medallist -Klaus Dibiasi from Italy, and the bronze went to James Henry from the USA.

Thirty-five athletes from 17 countries took part in the men's springboard diving event. The winner was Klaus Dibiasi from Italy, the second place was taken by Mexican diver Alvaro Gaxiola, the third place went to American athlete Edwin Young.

Award Medal

The obverse of the prize medal traditionally depicts the goddess Nike with the winner's wreath, which she holds in her right hand above her head. To her right there is an inscription "XIX Olympiad, Mexico City, 1968". The medals of the Games in Mexico City had a new element - an eyelet, to which a pad with a coloured silk ribbon 20 mm wide was attached. Different colours of ribbons were used for different sports. On the front of the pad there was an icon of sport, on the reverse - the name of the sport and a group of athletes who solemnly carried the famous ancient Greek Olympian Diagoras, as he greets the participants of the Games, and in his left he holds a palm branch.

From 1928 to 1968 (for 40 years) the reverse side of the Summer Olympics medal (the work of the Florentine artist Giuseppe Cassioli) remained unchanged.

Commemorative Medal

The Commemorative Medals are square-shaped and divided into different fields. 20 of them depict icons of Olympic sports. In the top there is an inscription "Mexico City-68" and the Olympic rings.

On the reverse side - the inscription "XIX Olympiad".

The Games of the XX
Olympiad (Munich, 1972)

The official poster of the Games of the XX Olympiad was designed to reflect the special spirit that prevailed in Munich in 1972. The design and colour scheme demonstrated the simplicity and genuineness of the buildings. The central element of the poster was a television tower against the backdrop of the Olympic Stadium. In the upper left corner was the symbol of the Olympic Games.

The diving events at the Games of the XX Olympiad were held from August 24 to September 4, 1972, in Munich (Federal Republic of Germany) in the Olympic Swimming pool.

The competition was attended by 91 athletes (41 of them women) from 25 countries.

Four sets of Olympic prizes were contested in the men's and women's 3-metre springboard and the 10-metre platform.

Thirty-two athletes from 16 countries took part in the men's springboard diving event. The champion was Vladimir Vasin, (USSR) who brought the first Olympic gold to the treasury of the USSR national team in diving. The silver medallist was Franco Giorgio Cagnotto (Italy), the bronze went to Craig Lincoln (USA).

Thirty-five athletes from 18 countries took part in the men's platform events. The gold medal was awarded to Klaus Dibiasi (Italy), the silver went to Richard Anthony "Dick" Rydze (USA), the bronze was awarded to Franco Giorgio Cagnotto (Italy).

Thirty female athletes from 18 countries took part in the women's springboard diving event. The champion was American athlete Micki King, in second place was Swedish diver Ulrika Margareta Knape-Lindberg, the third place went to the athlete from the German Democratic Republic Marina Janicke.

Award Medal

The design of the front side of the Award Medal, developed by Professor Cassioli, remained unchanged. Only the inscription "XX Olympiad, Munich, 1972" was changed. The sketch of the reverse side, created by designer Gerhard Marox, had the image of the twin brothers Argonauts - Castor and Pollux as a symbol of friendship and brotherhood. According to the decision of the IOC, the name of the Olympic discipline and the name of its owner were engraved on the medal. The traditional ribbon was replaced by a chain.

Commemorative Medal

On the upper part of the Commemorative Medal there was an image of the symbol of the 1972 Olympic Games, below it an inscription "XX Olympiad, Munich, 1972". The reverse side of the medal was occupied by an image of the palms holding an olive branch. The composition was completed by five Olympic rings. 12,000 copies of Commemorative Medals were presented in cases with an inscription: "Sketch by Professor Fritz Koenig, the medal is made of high-quality stainless steel, made by Preisler / Pforzheim".

Covers of official programmes in various sports of the Games of the XX Olympiad

The emblem of the Games of the XX Olympiad was a crown of rays of light, which symbolized the spirit of the Games in Munich - light, freshness, generosity and grandeur of the soul, embodied the "Radiant Munich". Designer - Otto Eicher.

The Games of the XXII Olympiad (Moscow, 1980)

The official poster of the Games of the XXII Olympiad depicts an Olympic symbol - five intertwined rings, above which part of the racetrack rises into the architectural silhouette of a typical Moscow building with a pentagonal star at the top (silhouette of the Kremlin tower). Designer: Vladimir Arsentiev.

The diving events at the Games of the XXII Olympiad were held at the “Olympiisky” sports complex from July 20 to 28, 1980 in Moscow, the capital of the USSR. These were the first-ever Olympic Games held in Eastern Europe.

More than 60 countries boycotted the Games in due to the Soviet invasion into Afghanistan in 1979. The national teams of some countries that boycotted the Games performed under the Olympic flag.

Sixty-seven athletes (33 of them women) from 21 countries participated in diving events.

Four sets of prizes were contested in the men’s and women’s 3-metre springboard and in the 10-metre platform.

Twenty-four athletes from 16 countries took part in the men’s springboard diving event. Aleksandr Portnov, a Soviet athlete from the Byelorussian SSR, became the Olympic champion, Carlos Girón (Mexico), won the silver medal, and Franco Giorgio Cagnotto (Italy), won the bronze medal.

Twenty-three athletes from 14 countries took part in the men’s platform diving events. Falk Hoffmann (GDR) was awarded gold, the silver medallist was the Soviet diver Vladimir Aleynik, bronze went to David Ambartsumyan (USSR, Armenian SSR).

Award Medal

The front side of the award medals preserved the design created earlier by Professor Cassioli, but the inscription "XXII Olympiad, Moscow, 1980" was made in Russian.

On the back of the medal, Moscow sculptor Ilya Postol depicted a blazing Olympic flame in the main torch of the stadium against the backdrop of the Olympic arena. The composition was completed by the symbol of the Games of the XXII Olympiad located in the upper right part - six racetracks shaped like a high-rise building, crowned with a star, at the base of which are five Olympic rings. The engraving of the name of the sport in which the medals were awarded was on the edge of the medal. The medals were made of gilded silver, silver and an alloy of copper and zinc with ribbons in the official Olympic colours attached to the ring.

Commemorative Medal

The designer of the Commemorative Medal, sculptor Angelina Leonova, depicted the symbol of the Games of the XXII Olympiad against the background of the stadium arena. In the upper right part of the medal there was an inscription "XXII Olympiad, Moscow, 1980". The reverse side of the medal was represented by a relief image of the Red Square in Moscow.

Award diploma of the Games of the XXII Olympiad

The Olympic symbol was created by Vladimir Arsentiev. Above the Olympic rings we can see parallel lines topped by a five-edged star, creating the silhouette of the Kremlin tower.

The Games of the XXIII
Olympiad (Los Angeles, 1984)

*The central place on the official poster was occupied by the image of the symbol of the XXIII Olympiad - three stars as a universal embodiment of humanity's desire for heights. Horizontal lines symbolize the speed of striving for perfection, and the repetition of the stars reflects the competitive spirit of various outstanding physical forms. The colours of the stars - blue, white and red - were chosen in connection to the traditional ideas about the colour of the awards for the first, second and third place. Approximately 10,000 copies were issued. 16 artists prepared 15 different posters for the Games of the XXIII Olympiad.
Designer: Alan Lithograph.*

The diving event of the Games of the XXIII Olympiad was held at the Olympic Swimming Centre, located on the campus of the University of South California from August 5 to 12, 1984 in Los Angeles (USA).

As a result of the US boycott of the previous Games of the XXII Olympiad in Moscow, the Games were boycotted by the USSR and other thirteen socialist countries (except China, Romania and Yugoslavia), which held alternative Druzhba-84 events. The official reason for the boycott was the refusal of the organisers of the Games of the XXIII Olympiad to satisfy the requirement to provide security guarantees to delegations from the USSR and other Warsaw Pact countries (a document that basically created a military union of European socialist states with the USSR).

The competition was attended by 80 athletes (including 35 women) from 29 countries.

Four sets of Olympic medals were contested in the men's and women's diving from a 3-metre springboard and a 10-metre platform.

Award Medal

A renowned artist Dugald Stermer was invited to design a sketch for the Award Medals of the Games of the XXIII Olympiad. This new design took the place of the traditional medals created by Professor Cassioli as a more modern and relevant version. Thus, the Designer was able to depict the proportions of the bodies of athletes with higher precision. The inscription on the obverse of the medal "XXIII Olympiad. Los Angeles, 1984. The medals were made of gilded silver, silver and bronze.

Commemorative Medal

The Olympic torch occupies the central place on the official Commemorative Medal. Above the circle there is an inscription "CITIUS • ALTIUS • FORTIUS" the Olympic slogan; below - "XXIII Olympiad". The reverse side is represented by the image of the official symbol of the Games, above which is the name of the host city - Los Angeles. The lower part of the medal is decorated with olive branches. A Commemorative Medal was awarded to the participants of the Olympic Games both the officials and athletes.

The Games of the XXIV
Olympiad (Seoul, 1988)

The official poster reflects the main idea of the Games, which is the harmony and progress of mankind. The five Olympic rings symbolize the pure Olympic spirit that spreads throughout the world. An athlete running with a torch is the embodiment of humanity's desire for happiness and prosperity. The poster is dominated by blue and orange, which are the symbols of Korea - the country of morning freshness. The poster was issued in 100,000 copies.

The diving events at the Games of the XXIV Olympiad took place from September 17 to 27, 1988 in Seoul (People's Republic of Korea) in the Olympic Park swimming pool.

Eighty-nine athletes (including 40 women) from 31 countries took part in the competition.

Four sets of prizes were contested in the men's and women's 3-metre springboard and the 10-metre platform.

Thirty-five athletes from 23 countries took part in the men's springboard diving event. Gregory Efthimios Louganis (USA) became an undisputed leader. Silver and bronze medals were awarded to the Chinese divers Tian Liang and Li Deliang.

Twenty-six athletes from 15 countries took part in the men's platform diving event. Gregory Efthimios Louganis became the Olympic champion, the silver medal went to Chinese athlete Xiong Ni, the bronze to Mexican athlete Jesús Mena Campos.

Twenty-seven female athletes from 19 countries took part in the women's springboard diving event. The victory was awarded to Chinese athlete Gao Min, the second place on the Olympic podium was taken by her compatriot Li Qing, Kelly McCormick from the USA came third.

Award Medal

Korea minting and security printing corporation developed the sketches for the Award Medal. Oh Dong-hwan and Pak Chang-sik left unchanged the plot of the obverse created by Professor Cassioli. The reverse side of the medal is represented by the image of a dove holding an olive branch in its beak as a symbol of peace in the world. The composition is complemented by the symbol of the Games - a spiral with five intertwined rings. The medals were made of gold gilded silver, silver and bronze.

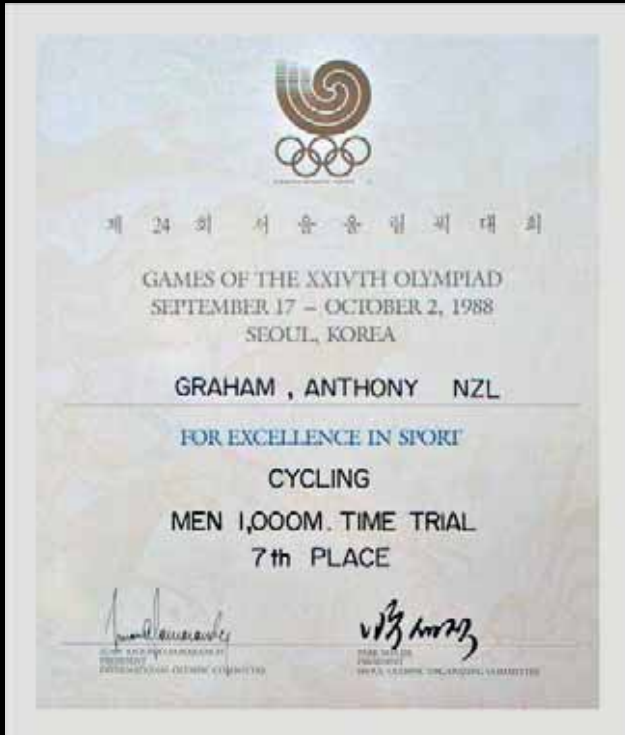

Commemorative Medal

On the obverse of the Commemorative Medal, its designer Kim Kwang Hoon, a member of the Korea minting and security printing corporation, depicted the famous South Gate against the backdrop of mountains and a pair of cranes soaring in the sky. The reverse side has the official symbol of the Games and the inscription "XXIV Olympiad, Seoul, 1988". Commemorative Medals made of copper were issued in 18,000 copies and presented to all the participants of the Games.

Official emblem

Professor Yang Sung-Chun united both centripetal and centrifugal forces in the samtaegeuk pattern of his emblem. The centripetal movement indicates the desire of the people of the world to come to Korea to participate of the Olympic Games, and the centrifugal movement indicates the search for lasting human happiness and prosperity.
